Mr. Wills is the grator of the house of representatives.

It is predicted that the railroad commission bill will have a stormy passage in the senate, if it gets through at all.

THE Healy railroad commission bill has passed in the house by a vote of 42 to 17. Both of Brad ford's- representatives championed the measure.

DR. GASKINS recently introduced a resolution to fix the per diem of members of the legislature at $5 a day. The resolution was promptly voted down.

WE notice by the dispatches from Tallahassee that Messrs. Gaskins and Wills, of Bradford, and Harris, of Monroe, championed the cause of the newspapers when an effort was made to cut off the publication and carries his audience with him. of notices of election. ## VERY HARMONIOUS.

Only on one occasion has Bradford's delegation in the house of the Crawford investigation.

It was one of deep feeling and was cheered to the echo. Bradford should feel proud of J. T. Wills, because he is a true representative of the people and is making his mark as a legislator."

> Speaking of the same speech the Times-Union pays Mr Wills the following compliment.

Most men can make a speech, but to few men is given the power to pour forth in words that live in the memory thoughts that have the power to win votes and determine the fate of legislative measures. There is, at least, one such man in the lower branch of the present legislature. His name is Wills and he is one of the members from Bradford county. One of the without being suspected of meanness quietest of men, his voice is rarely heard in the house, and it is only on rare occasions that he takes the floor

The debate on the Crawford matter, last Tuesday, was Mr. Wills' opportunity, and the manner in which he deprecated the harshness deal, but the stand taken shows that of the resolution of censure prethe hearts of these gentlemen are in pared by the special committee, was the right place, and the newspapers such as to change many votes, and nan.-New Yo.k Herald. at the close of his peroration the tears were standing in many eyes.
